PRESIDENTIAL CHECKUP

Step on the scale, sir. Physical finds he's tobacco-free and in great health

Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON Much as he complains about his gray hair and job stress, President Obama seems to be getting healthier as his term grinds along.

Obama's physician reported Monday that the president is in "excellent health."

His cholesterol count is down, his lungs are clear and his colon cancer test was negative, the report showed. Obama's weight is up, but only by a pound.

And he appears to have quit smoking for good; the doctor declared him "tobacco free." The results show an improvement in Obama's condition from his last physical, in February 2010. Here's the breakdown.

✓ HEART RATE:
67 beats
per minute

✓ CORONARY HEART DISEASE:
Should he win re-election, he would have less than a 2 percent chance of suffering coronary heart disease by the end of his second term.

✓ WEIGHT: 181, up
from 180 last year

✓ BLOOD PRESSURE:
107/71

✓ CHOLESTEROL: In 2010, his LDL cholesterol—that's the bad kind—stood at 138, or borderline high. His doctors advised him to cut out the pie and get the number down to 130. Obama knocked it down to a level of 110, which WebMD rates "near-optimal."

✓ INJURIES:
His lip has healed from a collision he endured in a pickup basketball game last year. Obama got a dozen stitches on his upper lip, which is "well-healed," according to the report compiled by Dr. Jeffrey C. Kuhlman.

✓ DIET: Obama has been sticking to a nutritious diet. He drinks in moderation and eats nutritious food.

No more puffs: Obama kicked the habit

When President Obama had his last physical in February 2010, he had not yet stopped smoking. His doctors at the time recommended he continue "smoking cessation efforts."

In June of 2009, when asked if he still smoked cigarettes, Obama said he was "95 percent cured"

but added "there are times when I mess up."

While his doctor's report—the second of his presidency—indicated Obama had conquered the nicotine habit that he began in his youth, there was no word from the White House on when he had his last smoke. REUTERS

Direct lines to the CTA now open

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 » tswartz
 @tribune.com
 » @tracyswartz

Typically, the CTA asks for your attention (please), but now you've got theirs.

Hearings about the 2012 CTA budget—which calls for management reductions but no service cuts or fare hikes to close a $277 million shortfall—start this week.

Riders will be able to voice their concerns about any transit issues to the CTA board Wednesday at Westinghouse High School, 3223 W. Franklin Blvd. Two budget meetings are scheduled for next week.

When fare hikes and service cuts are on the table, riders pack these meetings and protesters bang drums outside CTA headquarters on the Near West Side.

But when the CTA isn't contemplating changing fares or service, as was the case last year, only a handful of riders show up to these meetings and an opportunity to voice concerns is wasted.

The hearings are extended versions of the comments period at the beginning of each monthly transit board meeting. Riders have a few minutes to talk about any issues to the board, which sets CTA policy.

One rider recently pushed to include pregnant women in the priority seating designation for the elderly and people with disabilities.

Another rider successfully lobbied for attaching Harold Washington's name to the Library-State/Van Buren stop.

In most cases, only a few riders show up at the board meetings to address the board.

In addition to the budget hearing this week, there will be hearings Monday at CTA headquarters, 567 W. Lake St.; and Nov. 10 at Kennedy-King College, 740 W. 63rd St. All hearings will be held at 6 p.m.

If you can't make the meetings, there's a new way you can reach the CTA. On Tuesday, the transit agency is expected to launch a Facebook page and a Twitter feed, @cta.

The CTA has had no official social media presence. If riders want CTA breaking news alerts about their trains, some turn to @ctatweet and transit line feeds created by Chicago technologists Daniel X. O'Neil and Harper Reed.

More than a year ago, the duo used data posted by the CTA on its website to create an automatic feed to individual transit Twitter handles.

When a CTA worker was injured Monday at the Grand Red Line stop, which rerouted subway trains to elevated tracks, the Red Line feed, @ctared, tweeted about the incident. O'Neil said riders often tweet him service information before the CTA posts anything on its site.

"We're actively thinking about more things we can do given the CTA's [Twitter] move," said O'Neil, 44, of Bucktown. "I'm looking forward to finding out what they're going to do with [the account]."

Green initiatives announced for O'Hare, Midway

Rosemarie Andolino, Chicago's aviation commissioner, on Monday announced several green initiatives coming to O'Hare and Midway. The news comes as part of the 2011 Airports Going Green conference, which runs through Wednesday in downtown Chicago and at O'Hare. TRIBUNE

60 acres

Solar energy collectors will be installed on up to 60 acres at O'Hare.

1

A service station selling alternative fuels for private and commercial vehicles will open near O'Hare.

13

At Midway, a composting program will be launched to handle food waste from the Southwest Side airport's 13 restaurants.

200 tons

A private waste hauler will collect compostable materials at Midway, ranging from leftover food to cardboard boxes, and deliver them to an off-site composting facility, said Amy Malick, deputy commissioner of sustainability at the Chicago Department of Aviation. The Midway project follows a pilot composting program at O'Hare. A total of 200 tons of compostable waste at both airports will be diverted from landfills each year, Malick said.

Level II/ Level III

Charging stations for electric vehicles are currently provided free of charge at O'Hare and Midway parking garages. They are Level II charging stations. Level III stations will be added to reduce the charging time, officials said.

7

The city plans to issue a request for proposals in a few weeks inviting companies to bid to design, build and operate seven ground-based solar photovoltaic collection sites at O'Hare. The goal is to begin construction in about a year and to generate about 36 million kilowatt hours of energy per year, enough energy to power 3,800 homes annually, she said.

1

Currently, the only on-airport solar facility in Chicago is at O'Hare, at the Chicago Fire Department firehouse. The solar power generated there is used to heat water for the firehouse, officials said.

EXPRESS LINES

« Two men were arrested Monday with 89 cemetery vases and a funeral plaque worth thousands of dollars they apparently were going to sell to a recycler, police said.

» Northern Illinois University police re-opened a campus building Monday after a bomb threat, officials said. About 2 p.m. Monday, after what officials called an “extensive” investigation, an “all clear” was issued, and the building was opened to students and staff.

» Students at Truman College were evacuated Monday for several hours from the North Side school as officials searched the building after receiving a bomb threat, police said. No injuries were reported and no bombs were found before the school reopened.

» A CTA worker was injured Monday morning while working on the Red Line downtown, officials said. It was unclear how the male worker was injured at about 10:05 a.m. Work was being performed on the “L” tracks between Grand Avenue and Lake Street, according to the CTA. TRIBUNE

Oh, yes they did — boutique hotels bring the 'tude to Chicago

Chicago Tribune

The city of big shoulders historically has been famous for supporting hotels such as the 2,019-room Hyatt Regency Chicago, built in the 1970s, and the 1,544-room Hilton Chicago, once the world's largest lodging property. But they aren't making them like they used to.

In the aftermath of the recession, hotels still are popping up in Chicago but they're smaller and aim to be uber-stylish with an attitude, eschewing sameness and staidness.

"You couldn't build them like that today," hospitality consultant Ric Mandigo said of the mammoth properties that supply rooms for the city's conventions and events. "As these aren't as relevant as they once were, and with financing becoming more difficult, it just doesn't make sense to build huge hotels anymore."

Take the nine hotels that opened downtown in 2008 and 2009. They averaged fewer than 225 rooms, said Mandigo, a senior consultant at TR Mandigo & Co. By the end of 2011, new hotels that opened in the central business district over the past decade will have boosted the room supply by only 13 percent, he said.

It's more impressive for a traveler to New York to say that he or she stayed at, say, the Standard—a boutique hotel of An-

“It just doesn't make sense to build huge hotels anymore.”

WHAT'S A BOUTIQUE HOTEL?

No formal definition exists for "boutique," which frequently is tossed around in the hotel industry. It's like trying to define art, lodging industry observers say: "I know it when I see it."

dre Balazs, a onetime boyfriend of actress Uma Thurman—than to say they slept at a Hilton, among the big chains that provide consistent standards, said Mark Eble, vice president of consulting commercial real estate firm PKF Consulting.

Boutique properties typically skew upscale and are favored by younger travelers who prefer lodging with an edgier, quirkier or more fashionable look. As hotels try to avoid a cookie-cutter look, the traveling public often has strong feelings one way or another about them.

The buildings typically have fewer than 250 rooms, have smaller accommodations and aren't affiliated with national chains, or at least try to downplay any connection. Given the large number of franchised properties in Chicago already, for example, it's hard to find a brand that's not already represented, helping to fuel the number of properties claiming "boutique" or "lifestyle" status.

"One can only place so many Hiltons in downtown Chicago before the owners of the existing Hiltons object," Eble said. "In response to the boutique trend, the chains have introduced chain boutique concepts, a circumstance previously thought to be an oxymoron."

Examples include the W Hotels, affiliated with Starwood, and the Wit, which is a Doubletree, part of Hilton.

The opportunity for boutique hotels in big cities is excellent, Eble said.

"There just aren't enough brands to go around," he said, "and robust demand in some markets is keeping the rooms filled without the overhead of corporate marketing and reservations expense."

Meet the faith of your dreams

Chicago Tribune

For those who want to hook up with a Hindu, there is speed-dating at an Old Town lounge Wednesday.

But for those who want to meet a Muslim, Buddhist, Christian or Hindu and get to know a little about their faith, there will be a speed-faithing event Tuesday at Dominican University in River Forest.

Designed by students, the event which follows a public lecture by Interfaith Youth Core founder Eboo Patel, will rotate participants through five-minute conversations about their beliefs. Long enough to establish common ground, short enough to avoid offense, said Cassie Meyer, director of content for the Interfaith Youth Core who co-teaches a course on interfaith literacy with Patel.

"You're not trying to say everything about your religion before you switch," she said.

Nor should you, she said. Just like speed-dating, talking about religion can be scary.

"The stereotype of speed-dating is you have two minutes to judge someone," she said. "There's something to be said for speaking really quickly off the cuff about something. You'll have a chance to be thoughtful, but you don't have a chance to obsess about it."

Instead of seeking particulars, participants will be urged to ask more general questions: Do you think interfaith cooperation is important? What compels you to serve others? How and when do you pray, reflect or meditate?

Save "Do you snore?" for Wednesday.

4 BOSTON Widespread power outages, transit delays and long lines at gas stations marked the start of a challenging week for millions of residents in the Northeast, where a freak October snowstorm dropped more than 2 feet of snow in some places.

About 1.8 million customers in five states remained without power Monday, and officials warned it could be Friday before power is restored everywhere.

Utilities throughout the region reported significant progress in restoring power, but the cold, snowy conditions and house-by-house nature of the damage was slowing the work, officials said.

At least 13 deaths have been blamed on the weekend storm, which prompted emergency declarations from the governors of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts, and also put Halloween trick-or-treating plans in jeopardy. About a dozen Massachusetts cities have postponed the annual ritual, according to CNN affiliate WGBH.

At least 20 Connecticut cities and towns, including the capital city of Hartford, canceled events or asked parents to

"No amount of candy is worth a potentially serious or even fatal accident," the governor said in a statement.

In Worcester, Mass., officials asked residents to postpone celebrations until Thursday, when temperatures are expected to climb to 60 degrees. Trick-or-treating, the city said, would "put families and our youth in harm's way as they negotiate piles of snow and downed limbs."

NO MATTER WHO 'WINS' THE NBA LABOR SHOWDOWN, FANS LOSE IN THE SHORT TERM

By Scott Bolohan

FOR REDEYE

The NBA lockout has caused the cancellation of two weeks of the regular season. It's also locking out Bulls fans from their favorite team.

Tuesday should have been the day the Bulls opened the season against the defending champion Dallas Mavericks. Instead, the only "action" of any relevance is taking place inside conference rooms.

"The lockout has sucked," said Andrew Hummer, 23, of Orland Park. "After such an exciting season for the Bulls, the lockout couldn't have come at a worse time. Especially for a team that is as young, talented and exciting to watch as they are. You hate to be teased after such an awesome year last year to nothing."

At the heart of the lockout is the owners' desire for a hard salary cap and a greater percentage of the revenue, of which the players currently receive 57 percent. The owners are looking for a more even split. The two sides recently turned to a federal mediator to resolve their issues, to no avail. As of Monday, no settlement had been reached.

And the lockout has left more than just the players scrambling for ways to find income.

On a typical Bulls game night Chris Delgado, a manager at Hawkeye's Bar and Grill in Little Italy, said the bar shuttles up to 40 people to the United Center for home games, with up to 70 people coming to the bar only because the Bulls are playing.

Now Hawkeye's will have to find other ways to draw people, including promotions unrelated to sports.

"We are going to look more toward hockey," Delgado said. "We'll get the hockey [TV] package so people can see more teams and we'll do

“ [The owners and players] are going to get their money either way. Us making our money depends on people coming to the neighborhood and getting people to come in, so with that being gone it's going to be tougher. It's a big loss financially.”

—Chris Delgado (above), a manager at Hawkeye's Bar and Grill in Little Italy more with the Blackhawks. We do other things like trivia night on Tuesdays, so we might up that to a couple times a week to get more people in here.”

While Delgado said he wasn't upset at the NBA players and owners personally, he said the people who will suffer most are people like him who work for businesses that depend on the Bulls playing.

“[The owners and players] are going to get their money either way,” he said. “Us making our money depends on people coming to the neighborhood and getting people to come in, so with that being gone it's going to be tougher. It's a big loss financially.”

Stephanie Gabriel, 22, of West Rogers Park, said she watches every Bulls game “religiously” and tweets along with the action. Gabriel is a blogger for bullsextra.com and now has to write about a team not playing games.

“There isn't much to blog about; it all becomes redundant,” she said. “I try to keep up with some players overseas, especially if it's a Bull, but the media is not as strong where I am able to find quick info about the game and stats.”

Hummer said he watches nearly every Bulls game on TV and will look for ways to fill the void. He too probably will turn to hockey.

“Thankfully the Hawks season is upon us,” he said. “They will be exciting to watch so I will probably get into the Hawks more than normal.”

But for others, their love of basketball trumps other sports. Kelsey Zahn, 23, of Wheeling, said she probably wouldn't watch any other sport if the season were canceled, joking she'd take up knitting to pass the time. She said the effects of the lockout will be felt in many aspects of her life—even at work.

“The worst part about not having an NBA season is the possibility of not having Stacey King in my life,” she said of the Bulls' color commentator for TV broadcasts. “His comments were always the best material for signs at games and for laughs at the office. What will we talk about at our 9:52 a.m. meetings at work?”

Lauren Campion, 26, of Lakeview, said the lack of an NBA season will have a dramatic effect on her life.

“Not having basketball is one of the worst things that could happen to me,” she said. “My motivation to work out will diminish with no basketball unless I stay up until who knows when to watch my favorite players in Europe. If I am up all night, my productivity level at work will be close to zero. I'm going to end up fat and unemployed.”

Fat and unemployed is exactly what Bulls fans don't want to happen—to themselves or the players.

FOR REDEYE

Sam Mack played in the NBA for 10 seasons on five teams. But while his old teams aren't playing right now, Mack still is. He's a member of the American Basketball Association's Chicago Steam. Last season the Steam were the Midwest Regional ABA champs and Mack was an all-star. With the increasing likelihood that the Bulls won't play this year, the Steam are hoping basketball fans will turn their attention to the ABA.

OPEN COURT

The Chicago Steam open their season against Milwaukee at 6:30 p.m. Friday at Fosco Park, 1312 S. Racine Ave. The team also occasionally plays home games at South Suburban College, 15800 S. State St., South Holland. For ticket information, visit chicagosteambasketball.com.

What should NBA fans know about the ABA?

These guys are aspiring NBA players trying to get to the NBA. These guys are just as hard-working and possibly even harder because they want a chance to perform on that level, so they compete. It's a steppingstone to get to a higher plateau.

What is the atmosphere like at an ABA game?

A lot of it depends on the geographical area. We travel to Michigan and the fan support is tremendous. When we travel to a little smaller markets and they're very supportive, it's like a college game. Of course in Chicago here we only get 300 fans sometimes, but those fans are into the game.

Who are some of the most exciting players in the league?

On the Steam, Rico Hill is very, very talented. It's a wonder why he's not playing in the NBA. You have a couple guys from the Michigan team who are really talented, the Kentucky team. We have ABA games out in Los Angeles and the East Coast so we're trying to make it one big major league. They're trying to spread it out so people can see that there's talent here in the United States. You don't have to go overseas.

What do you think of the NBA lockout?

I follow it. I was the team rep in 1997-1998 when we went through this horrible thing back then, so I would go to all the meetings. But I think it's a shame. We are taking away the game from the fans. But the fans have to realize, it's not the players. It's the owners' decision to lock out.

Will the ABA benefit from it?

No doubt. I think if the lockout continues to last, all these other leagues will benefit because the fans want to see basketball.

1 What have you missed most about the Bears during their bye week?	All the unprotected sacks.	Their smiles.	Their orange jerseys in honor of Halloween, not to mention their scary faces.	Who doesn't miss Lovie running out of timeouts with 12 minutes left in the first quarter? sheds tear	I've really missed the cathartic effect of cursing while throwing things at my TV.
2 What's really behind the "Tebowing" craze?	What? People can't think before tying their shoes anymore?	Cutlery by faking sick from work takes too much effort.	John Elway is trying to relive his career through him. Minus the horselike teeth!	Jesus. He's convinced players that football is 20 times more important than peace, the poor and the sick.	The same thing that was behind planking: the intense desire to appear on "Tosh.O."
3 Why are so many NFL players fighting on the sidelines?	That's because Roger Goodell allows so little contact on the field.	Violent video games and Marilyn Manson.	They're training for MMA just in case this football thing doesn't work out.	You think discussions of "who gets to Gatorade-dunk the coach" are peaceful? Pshaw!	See, that's why pro athletes shouldn't have fantasy football teams. Work and play don't mix.
4 If the NBA labor deal is "95 percent complete," what's the other 5 percent?	Their agents' take.	LeBron's fourth-quarter shooting percentage.	Figuring out how LeBron, Kobe and D-Wade can make up all the lost bonuses.	Wondering if the union should help retirees, or just cover child support for Shawn Kemp's 97 illegitimate kids.	The players want compensation for looking at TNT sportscaster Craig Sager's hideous suits.
5 Playing three NHL games in four nights is like ...	... still less physical and mental punishment than 72 days with Kim Kardashian.	... totally ruining business at the bars in Patrick Kane's neighborhood.	... Kim Kardashian staying married for more than 72 days—demanding.	... dating Donald Trump—really tiring, but when it's all said and done, the money is pretty good.	... track No. 4 on Dave Matthews Band's "Crash": "Too Much."

Here come the (virtual) Bulls

It's the best we can do until the lockout's over

By Ryan Smith

FOR REDEYE

Bulls fans are so upset with the NBA, it's a small wonder there hasn't been an Occupy United Center protest. Recent talks between the owners and the players union to end the lockout broke down last week, prompting Commissioner David Stern to cancel this month's entire slate of games. That means we don't know when we'll get another chance to see reigning MVP Derrick Rose and his up-and-coming Bulls team take the court again. In the meantime, RedEye decided to take a look into our virtual crystal ball in the form of the video game "NBA 2K12" and simulate each game we'll be missing this season. RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

BULLS 101, DALLAS 91

Leading scorer: Keith Bogans, 27 points

Looks like the Bulls want jewelry of their own. Shortly after watching the Mavericks show off their bling in the form of NBA title rings in a pregame ceremony, Chicago smacks the defending champs around in a game they lead wire to wire.

RECORD: 1-0

BULLS 98, NEW ORLEANS 97 (OT)

Player of the game: Derrick Rose: 28 points, 8 assists, 2 blocks
Rose shows why he's the MVP by racking up 18 second-half points and hitting a 3-point shot in Chris Paul's face at the buzzer to send it to overtime. Carlos Boozer seals the deal with six points in OT.

RECORD: 2-0

BULLS 87, ATLANTA 75

Key stat: The Bulls' 17-2 run in the second quarter

The Bulls open at home in style by dominating one of their rivals from last year's playoffs. Chicago shoots 50 percent from the field and overcomes 35 points from Hawks guard Joe Johnson. The bad news: Bogans leaves with a back strain and is out one to two weeks.

RECORD: 3-0

LOCKOUT RUNDOWN

Just like what happened with the NFL, expect all you-know-what to break loose when the NBA lockout ends. Until then, here's what the Bulls organization has been up to as the labor dispute reaches Day 124. TRIBUNE

» Coach Tom Thibodeau and his staff have been logging normal business hours at the Berto Center.

» The Bulls will have 13 players under contract, counting the formality of signing first-round pick Jimmy Butler to his rookie deal. Fellow first-round pick Nikola Mirotic will remain overseas for at least a few seasons.

» John Lucas III owns a fully non-guaranteed deal. The Bulls hold team options on Jannero Pargo and starting shooting guard Keith Bogans, scheduled to make $1,728,000.

» Grant Hill, Caron Butler, Tayshaun Prince, Jamal Crawford and Jason Richardson are among the intriguing wing players who will be unrestricted free agents should they fit in the Bulls' salary structure.

HOT DATE WEDNESDAY

NBA-related news won't be all bad this week. Comcast SportsNet will begin airing its four-part documentary series "The Making of the Luvabulls" starting at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The other three parts will be broadcast at 7 p.m. Nov. 9, 15 and 22, respectively. PHOTOS COURTESY OF COMCAST SPORTSNET

The boys of summer ... and fall

The White Sox and Cubs have wasted no time making news in the offseason. Here are Monday's highlights.

Mark Buehrle

WINNING

White Sox free agent ace Mark Buehrle won his third Fielding Bible Award on Monday, given to the best fielding player at each position. "He saved an estimated nine runs defensively for the White Sox in 2011, tops among all pitchers in baseball," wrote John Dewan, co-author of "The Fielding Bible—Volume III." Buehrle will find out Tuesday whether he will win a Gold Glove for the third straight season.

RE-SIGNING

The Cubs will decline pitcher Jeff Samardzija's $3 million option for 2012 and re-sign him at a lower salary. Samardzija is ineligible for arbitration, but was given a five-year, $10 million option in 2007 with options for 2012 and 2013. The Cubs can cut his salary up to 20 percent.

INTRODUCING

New Cubs general manager Jed Hoyer will be introduced at a news conference at 3 p.m. Tuesday at Wrigley Field, along with new scouting boss Jason McLeod.

HOPING

White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf hasn't talked to Tony La Russa about joining the team's front office, but he confirmed his interest in a phone interview with the Tribune. Asked if he would like to work again with La Russa, who announced his retirement as a manager Monday, Reinsdorf said: "I would love to."

HIRING

The White Sox on Monday confirmed the hirings of Joe McEwing, Jeff Manto and Mark Parent as coaches to their 2012 staff. McEwing, 39, who replaces third-base coach Jeff Cox, managed Triple-A Charlotte the past two seasons and currently is managing the Mesa Solar Sox of the Arizona Fall League. Manto, 47, takes over as hitting coach while Parent, 50, is the new bench coach.

BLACKHAWKS 5, NASHVILLE 4 (OT)

Viktor Stalberg scored in overtime Monday to lift the Blackhawks to their third win in four games. Patrick Kane scored twice and had an assist. The news was not all good for the Hawks (7-2-2), as Duncan Keith left the game in the second period and did not return.

THE FINISH LINE

» Bears-Detroit game Nov. 13 moved to 3:15 p.m. kickoff

» Pitcher CC Sabathia, N.Y. Yankees agree to new deal

30+ THINGS TO DO THIS MONTH

By Jessica Gallart | REDEYE

And just like that, the holiday season is upon us. Brace yourselves for lots of funky holiday shopping events, seasonal ceremonies, family-style dinners, brew fests and a few non-holiday bashes in between, for when the spirit begins to overwhelm you.

3-6 SOFA CHICAGO 2011*Navy Pier

600 E. Grand Ave.

Short for the International Exposition of Sculpture Objects and Functional Art, this annual art bash will make even the biggest art cynic swoon over works of glass, ceramic, wood, metal and fibers from international artists. All artwork is for sale, but go if only for a fresh dose of inspiration for your blank walls. Times vary. $15-$50.

5 BEER HOPTACULAR*Aragon Ballroom 1106 W. Lawrence Ave.

No need to pre-game this one. Beer bros unite for one of two sessions including samples of more than 100 small-batch beers from 35 breweries. Mingle with other beer nerds to trade home-brewing tips (or phone numbers, if you're lucky), cast your vote for the best brew and leave with your souvenir sampling glass in tow. 1-4:30 p.m. and 6-9:30 p.m. $35.

CHICAGO VEGANMANIA*Pulaski Park Fieldhouse 1419 W. Blackhawk St.

For those always celebrating a No Meat November, check out this annual fest celebrating all things vegan. Local vegan eateries, companies and artists set up shop, and guest speakers, musicians and others provide entertainment. 10 a.m.-5 p.m. No cover.

6 BATTLE OF THE BHUT
Jake Melnick's Corner Tap

41 E. Superior St.

It's pronounced "boot," and it's outrageously hot. Watch competitive eaters enter a world of hurt as they devour wings made with bhut jolokia peppers, named the hottest of its kind by the Guinness Book of World Records, in this contest supported by the International Federation of Competitive Eating. Think you have the stomach for it? Sign up to compete for a shot at the $1,000 prize—and the worst stomachache of your life. 1 p.m. No cover.

Reality bites

Aw, Kim and Kris, we hardly knew ye—or did we?

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

OK, who had 72 days in their office pool? Kim Kardashian filed for divorce Monday from NBA player Kris Humphries—who, with the whole lockout thing still going on plus allegations he was scammed by an investment partner, is having the worst week EVER. While we at RedEye still are in the process of clutching our bosoms and wiping away our tears, we thought we'd take a look back at the sweet, sweet memories of these ill-fated lovers. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

Kim splits from model Gabriel Aubry to focus exclusively on dating Kris, whom she met while filming "Kourtney and Kim Take New York." Apparently New York isn't all Kim took.

Surprise No. 1! Kim throws a secret bash for her beau's 26th birthday in New York. His parents also are invited—someone's trying to get in good early with the future in-laws.

FEBRUARY

MARCH

Someone's biological clock is going off big time. Kim tweeted a pic of Kris as a little boy, adding "I want my son to look like this!"

“I never think love is hard. I think if it's meant to be, it's meant to be.” —Kim

"I don't think Kris knows what he's getting into. ... The initiation process will happen this summer—if he lasts. If he can get out of that alive, then he's good to stay."

—Khloe Kardashian

20.5

That's the number of carats of Kim's engagement diamond, which clocked in at a whopping $2 million.

AUG. 20

Kim and Kris were married in Montecito, Calif. People magazine had exclusive photo rights to the event, and oh hey, ended up putting only the bride on the cover with the headline "Kim's Wedding Album." Ouch.

"I'm going to remember how perfect it was." —Kris

"It was like we were in heaven." —Kim

THE FINAL WORD

"I hope everyone understands this was not an easy decision. I had hoped this marriage was forever but sometimes things don't work out as planned." —Kim, in a statement

"I love my wife and am devastated to learn she filed for divorce. I'm committed to this marriage and everything this covenant represents. I'm willing to do whatever it takes to make it work." —Kris

72

Number of days Kim and Kris were married before she filed for divorce.

"I kissed him goodnight and I was like, 'Happy one-month anniversary.' He was like, 'How did you remember?'" —Kim, on Kris forgetting that they had been married a month. This bodes well.

OUTTA TIME

We've gotta sympathize with Kim Kardashian and Kris Humphries. Seventy-two days is a long time to ... OK, we couldn't even get through that sentence. Here's a look at other celebs who just couldn't make it work. REDEYE

JENNIFER LOPEZ AND CRIS JUDD

Perhaps she should be "Jenny from the aisle." JLo has had three failed marriages. The second was to dancer Cris Judd, which lasted eight months from October 2001 to July 2002. She previously was married to Ojani Noa for 13 months.

CHARLIE SHEEN AND DONNA PEELE

Long before he was winning as a warlock, Sheen was losing in love. His first marriage to model Donna Peele lasted four months and 24 days. Sheen later would become very familiar with divorce proceedings. He's had two other failed marriages.

MARIO LOPEZ AND ALI LANDRY

The "Saved by the Bell" actor and the Doritos commercial star didn't even make it two weeks. The couple split in 2004 amid rumors of Lopez's infidelity.

DENNIS RODMAN AND CARMEN ELECTRA

The Bulls forward and the "Baywatch" star were happily married in 1998 ... for nine days. When he filed for annulment, Rodman said he was of "unsound mind" when they married.

BRITNEY SPEARS AND JASON ALEXANDER

55 hours. That's how long the marriage between the pop star and childhood friend Jason Alexander lasted in 2004. Of course, they tied in the knot in Vegas. She had the marriage annulled.

"I am very happy where I'm at. ... But as of right now, no marriage, nothing like that. We're happy." —Kim

MAY 18

That's when Kris popped the question to Kim, writing "Will you marry me?" in rose petals on her bedroom floor.

$840

That's the value of an ashtray on Kris and Kim's wedding registry.

JULY 23

That's when Kris and Kim held their Vegas bachelor and bachelorette parties. But apparently someone forgot to tell Kim that bachelor parties are for dudes, because she popped up at Kris' soiree. Honey, it's called trust.

"Property of Kim Kardashian FOR LIFE."

—The message on Kris' bachelor-party cake. Yes, that still applies, ladies, so step off.

"I don't want to help because Kim is going to be such a bridezilla! If I do one thing wrong, I'll be screwed!" —Khloe Kardashian

OCT. 9 &amp; 10

That's when Kris and Kim's two-part wedding special, "Kim's Fairytale Wedding: A Kardashian Event," aired on E! Actually, given that title, we probably should say Kim's two-part wedding special.

LIONESS:
HIDDEN
TREASURES

Forever Amy

Fans haven't heard the last of the late Amy Winehouse. The singer's third album will be released Dec. 5, according to her website. "Lioness: Hidden Treasures" will feature 12 tracks recorded between 2002 and 2008, including "Body and Soul," her duet with Tony Bennett.

Say cheese!

After catching flak recently for sporting a mouth full of yellow, unhealthy-looking teeth, Lindsay Lohan showed off a pic of a brand new smile over the weekend on Twitter. She said the teeth-whitening procedure Zoom is responsible for her new pearly whites. Aw, what a tweet tooth.

Mummy dearest

Jessica Simpson has more than a good Halloween costume to celebrate. "It's true! I am going to be a mummy!" the soon-to-be mom confirmed Monday on her website, posting the message with a picture of herself in a mummy costume and clutching her baby bump. Simpson is engaged to former NFL player Eric Johnson.

TEAM DRAKE

What do Lil Wayne, Rihanna, Nicki Minaj, Rick Ross and Andre 3000 have in common? They're all performing on Drake's (left) highly anticipated sophomore album, "Take Care," billboard.com reports. Each member of the all-star crew is featured on one of

Drizzy's new tracks—and Lil Wayne appears on three separate songs. The album is due out Nov. 15. GETTYIMAGES/FILE PHOTO
